TIPS FOR A BEE FRIENDLY GARDEN

Bees are totally dependant on flowers, from which they sip liquid food, or nectar. They owe their existence to flowers, their very survival depends on it, more so now than ever. Bees require a diversity of flowering plants, weeds, bushes, tree gums and resins to ensure the comucopia of flowers that will strengthen their immunity. Plants seduce honeybees with their favourite cocktail, a nectar drink that oozes from the flower's deep centre. This is the honeybee's lifeline.

As the bee squeezes its delicate body inside the petals to get to the nectar, it wades through a snowstorm of pollen grains (the sperm of the plant world). The electric charge of the bee's hairs directly attracts pollen, which inevitably sticks to them, ensuring pollen collection and delivery to the next plant in one swoop. Bees can gather from as many as 100 flowers of the same species on a single journey, ensuring pollination of next year's crop of apples, pears, almonds and much more.

Nectar is precious to all bees and serve as an instant energiser for their winter pantry. Now the miracle of honey-making can begin!

Do you want to make the natural world more bee-friendly? The best place to start is your immediate environment like your own back garden. Sow bee friendly flower seeds in pots or directly in your garden to provide essential nutrition for bees - herewith a few examples and tips to start off with:

Basil, Borage, Catmint, Chives, Clover, Dahlia, Daisy, Goldenrod, Lavender, Marigold, Poppy, Rhododendron, Sage, Sunflowers, Fennel, Mustard - these are terrific for bees and look great!

Also allow a patch of grass to grow long and densely plant an area of a border to provide bees with shelter from rain or a sudden drop of temperature. Reduce the use of pesticides in your garden and remember: Bees need water - place pebbles in a shallow dish of water and you will be bombarded with honeybees after just a few days! Keep it replenished and they will keep returning: Bees have good memories!
